

Berlin, 19 December 2008

Dear Jane,

Many thanks for your application to be a participant on the transmediale.09 streaming Workshop - your participation would be of great benefit to our team.

As you know, transmediale is one of the leading festivals for art and digital culture internationally. On a yearly basis it presents advanced artistic positions reflecting on the socio-cultural impact of new technologies. Its program includes a conference, an exhibition, live performances, film and video programs and a variety of partner events throughout Berlin.

The workshop will allow people interested in media to learn the current techniques of interactive live broadcast and, within the space of the transmediale festival, test them in a 'real-time situation'. Run by an international team of leading developers, programmers and training staff, the workshop's aim is to impart the possibilities and opportunities within new areas of broadcast, from TV to webstreaming, and to offer an insight in the worlds of online journalism, reportage, blogging and moderation.

We very much hope that you will be able to join our team as your expertise would be invaluable to the festival. Your professional experience and your previous work with electronic art, digital culture and media festivals would be a real asset. As a result of your taking part in the festival, you will make extensive international contacts, share in global streaming networks and learn many skills transferrable to your personal career.

I look forward to hearing from you and if there is anyway in which we can help to ensure your journey to Berlin happens, please let us know.

Many thanks,

Adam Thomas
